Other offices within the OIG, such as the Office of Investigations or the Office of Counsel to the Inspector General, may have a need on a case-by-case basis to review audits conducted using TeamMate. Other law enforcement agencies may be provided the information based on the scope and findings of an audit; information may also be shared with auditees and other third parties when necessary to obtain information relevant to the audit. Triennially, the OIG's audit process is subject to a quality control review conducted by the Inspector General of another agency.

The system is used in conducting audit work of the Department of Health and Human Services programs and in preparing related reports on behalf of the OIG. It is a vertical application that documents the audit process - planning preparation, review, report generation and storage - in an electronic format. The nature and scope of the information is determined by the objectives of the audit. Therefore, the information pertaining to a specific audit may or may not contain personally identifiable information. The conduct of audits and the issuance of audit reports are integral to OIG's mission.

OIG: OIG Audit Work System (TeamMate)

- 18

Describe the consent process:
- Personally identifiable information is not directly retrievable from the Audit Work System. Such information is generally peripheral to the audit and obtained from the auditee. An audit start notice is provided to the auditee containing the description and objectives of the audit. Sufficient background is included to inform the reader of the audit process. In addition to the audit start notice, auditors send a notification letter to the auditee on all audits and reviews. A notification letter provides a means of formalizing the understanding between the OIG and the auditee concerning the objectives of the audit as well as apprising auditees of the documents and records which it should make available to auditors.

Describe the IIF security controls:

Access to information on specific audits is further restricted based on role-based security features that limit access to assigned auditors, reviewers, and managers. App 3. The system is maintained for the purpose of documenting, tracking, and reporting OIG's audit, inspection, and investigative activities.
